Your opinion counts

If you have an opinion about the hospital redevelopment, please speak to a member of staff or complete a form.

Brighton and Sussex University Hospitals and the 3Ts redevelopment team are dedicated to building the best possible hospital, both inside and out. This is why we actively engage with local residents, interest groups, patients and statutory bodies about the project. One of the results of the process so far can be seen in the two images below.

The new hospital design - January 2010

These changes occurred after extensive consultation with local residents, English Heritage, local interest groups and Brighton and Hove City Council planners.

The consultation and engagement programme around the hospital redevelopment doesn’t end with the outside of the building. Regular design meetings are held with healthcare professionals, expert patients and users of services to optimise the design of all the departments in the new buildings. The engagement programme will continue to connect with people from across the city and the region to ensure the best healthcare future for all the users of the Royal Sussex County Hospital.

A.7 - Local Media Articles about 3Ts proposal

Seize this opportunity

by SIOBHAN RYAN

“If we don’t seize this opportunity now, then it will be 15 years before we get the same chance again.”

The city is the latest to join forces with Brighton and Hove, Lancing and Worthing in an £11m appeal for a major redevelopment of the site.

The hospital has spent the past two years looking into the feasibility of joining forces with Worthing and Horsham in an appeal for a new hospital for the local area.

Mrs Halle-Richards said: “It is a massive undertaking and will deliver the capability of the hospital’s old site and it will have to do the job.

The site is divided into a new image which means she would be able to have a helipad at night.

The fear now is that unless this happens it will mean that the city’s health service will be lost and the money will be taken away from the local area.

The hospital has to get its application into the council and there are still some issues about what will happen if the appeal is not approved.

The hospital wants to get its application in before the council and there are concerns about what will happen if the appeal is not approved.

The council leader Mary Mears said: “It’s a major project for the city but we have to consider what’s best for the hospital and what’s best for the community.”

The hospital is being lined up as one of the best opportunities for a new hospital in the area.

Council head of planning Martin Randall said: “It’s a massive opportunity and it is crucial that we make the most of it.”

In the current economic climate it is crucial that the hospital makes as much of the proposed build as possible.

“Everyone is working to make sure that this goes ahead and we will bring in more jobs to the local area.”

The hospital has redesigned its overall plan in a very short time.
